Speech and Hearing Clinic Opened in Australia

The first speech and hearing clinic in Australia was opened at St. Vincent's Hospital, Sydney, in September 1961. Patterned on the hearing clinic at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, U.S.A., the new clinic offers the deaf person or those handicapped by a hearing defect the chance to recover their hearing completely through surgery, or at least improve it to the level where they can fit easily into society.

The clinic will have three main functions:

1. To assess and diagnose accurately all types of hearing defects, and recommend suitable treatment.

2. To treat unusual cases of deafness, such as that caused by rare types of brain tumour.

3. To carry out a thorough research program investigating various types of unsolved hearing problems, such as deafness in the newborn, early deafness among teenagers (which is on the increase), and scores of other hearing complaints.

Not only will the clinic diagnose and treat cases of deafness, but it will also provide for the total rehabilitation of the deaf and hard-of-hearing by lip-reading courses, recommendation of the correct types of hearing aids, and even finding suitable work for the disabled deaf and assisting to train them in their work.

Combatting Infant Mortality in Sierra Leone

A simple mud stove, but built in the way African women want; a chief peering interestedly into a bean pot to see cooked evidence of better nutrition; midwives learning basic hygiene. These are ways in which African people are learning to help themselves.

Faced with a phenomenal infant mortality rate up to the age of six, the government of Sierra Leone will try to correct the problem right where it begins — in the family itself.

The program calls for improved home and family living through family education. Aiding the government in the program will be Jean Steckle, a Food and Agriculture Organization home economist from Kitchener, Ont.

Grant for Genetics Study

A five-year grant totalling more than a quarter of a million dollars has been awarded to Dr. Irene Uchida, director of the department of genetics in the Children's Hospital, Winnipeg, Man., by the United States National Institute of Health. The money may be used for direct costs and the purchase of equipment necessary in the research work.
